Interpreting and Translation Linguists Collective (LC) Agency Announces
Annual Conference Celebrating International Mother Language Day
Bedford, United Kingdom – 01 February 2024

The Interpreting and Translation Linguists Collective (LC) Agency is thrilled to announce its annual conference, coinciding with the celebration of International Mother Language Day (IMLD), scheduled for Wednesday, February 21st, 2024.

The conference will bring together linguists, service users, industry experts, regulators, and language enthusiasts from around the globe for a dynamic exchange of ideas, experiences, and insights. Attendees can expect a thought-provoking agenda featuring sessions on crucial topics such as:

9:30 Hrs.: Best Practices for Communicating Through an Interpreter

13:00 Hrs.: Rare and Dying Languages of the World

14:15 Hrs.: Multilingual Education: The Foundation of Learning and Intergenerational Learning

19:30 Hrs.: AI and The Future of Linguists

All sessions will be conducted virtually, allowing participants to join from any location. Interested individuals are encouraged to register early due to limited seating.

The conference promises to offer insightful discussions led by notable speakers, providing attendees with the opportunity to learn more about languages, access language services from the Linguists Collective, and engage in conversations about the preservation of endangered languages. A full list of speakers can be found on the conference website <https://conference.linguistscollective.info>.

"We are excited to host this year's conference, which serves as a platform for celebrating linguistic diversity and addressing the challenges faced by linguists and language service users worldwide," - Conference Organising Team, LC Agency.
